Shooting video/photos?	Yes, both
Reader/viewer of their story:	With a strong split between an Australian readership and Australian expats (mostly in the US), we appeal most strongly to solo travellers, those who travel for food and culture, luxury splurges at the start or end of event-based travel, and creatives who travel frequently for art, food and music events. Our readers care about: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Culture. There has to be an in-depth cultural or historical element to tie to, with our readers focused on the arts.</li> <li>-A wellness or restorative angle, could be physical wellness or mental wellness but as long as the experience can bring personal value to visitors.</li> <li>-Quirky. Focused on interesting, "hipster" neighbourhoods and trendy arts districts where creatives have created something original and wholly unique to the destination.</li> </ul>
Most want to experience:	I'm trying to incorporate more wellness (both physical and mental) into our travel features, so history, heritage and nature are primary interests. Luxury and historic hotel features perform well for us and we're always interested in the arts/music. Food &amp; drink is of interest only if it's unique to the destination.
What makes a great story:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Lesser-known local experiences — culinary and entertainment</li> <li>-Local people, identities and artisans</li> </ul>

Bio	Kate Cox is Head of Travel for Australian Community Media (ACM), overseeing the Explore travel section, which runs across 15 daily newspapers nationally, as well as travel content across ACM's digital network. ACM represents more than 140 mastheads across Australia, reaching regional and community audiences at scale.  Kate has led national content teams, established content studios and overseen branded and editorial storytelling across print, digital and broadcast. She has also been a regular panelist on Channel 9's The Morning Show and Sunrise, commenting on current affairs and lifestyle topics. A passionate traveler, Kate has visited all seven continents, including completing a year-long lap of Australia with her young family.
Shooting video/photos?	Yes ("Would appreciate an overview of what photography and video assets are already available to help plan the visual package.")
Reader/viewer of their story:	Explore is the travel brand of Australian Community Media (ACM), Australia's largest independent publisher. Content is distributed across 60+ mastheads and published in print in Explore magazine and Explore Extra, which runs in all 28 ACM newspapers. The audience is broad — couples, solo travellers, families and retirees — but they over-index on travel, tend to stay longer and spend more. Top-performing topics include train travel, food and dining, local community stories, new destinations and events. International destinations that resonate include Japan, USA, Bali, South Korea, Europe, and off-the-beaten-track picks like Palau, Norfolk Island and the Arctic. Outdoor and adventure content performs well, as do flight and hotel reviews. The audience appreciates first-person pieces, tips and practical advice. They're not budget travellers but respond well to deals and 'hack' stories. Wellness is a growing area of interest.
Most want to experience:	Open to being guided by Travel South on the best story angles. Current thinking is a wider wrap story capturing unique experiences, plus a separate food story — food is likely a key motivation for ACM readers visiting the region. Stories may also include a hotel review, flight review or a Hungry Traveller column piece focused on a memorable food moment. Will remain alert to bonus stories: a standout moment, a money-can't-buy experience, a best-of list item.

What makes a great story:	-Unique places and experiences she can share exclusively with her audience - making them feel the trip and want to go -Unique people - always great for color, movement and memorable quotes -A detailed itinerary to research before arrival, plus adequate time to think, absorb and seek out non-mass experiences

Bio	Get Lost Magazine is Australia's leading adventure travel title known for its irreverent voice, bold first-person narratives and commitment to immersive, on-the-ground storytelling. Rather than list-led travel coverage, Get Lost champions long-form features that prioritize character, culture and lived experience, often placing the writer directly in the story. The result is journalism that feels raw, curious and deeply connected to place.  Under Justin's editorial leadership, the magazine has carved out a distinct position in the Australian media landscape. It speaks to independent, experience-driven travellers who value authenticity over polish and seek destinations with texture and personality. The publication is known for uncovering lesser-known angles, spotlighting subcultures and encouraging readers to step beyond the expected. Justin's editorial style blends humor, candor and sharp cultural observation. He is drawn to stories that challenge perception and reveal the human layers of a destination, from regional food traditions and music heritage to evolving travel trends. Beyond print and digital, Justin is a recognized voice in Australian travel media. He discusses travel trends weekly on 2GB's top-rating Chris Smith Afternoon show and has appeared regularly on 3AW's travel and food program A Moveable Feast, as well as on Qantas' inflight program Up and Away, across the Austereo network and on ABC nationally.

Reader/viewer of their story:	The Get Lost reader is typically 30–55, professionally established, cash-rich but time-poor, and deeply suspicious of anything that feels mass-produced. They value experience over luxury but still appreciate quality — a good lodge, a strong negroni, high thread-count sheets. They're culturally curious, environmentally aware, and seek travel with meaning: remote trails, family-run eateries, expedition vessels, desert roads, mountain air and the perfect local night out. They want to feel like travellers, not tourists. What does your reader care most about when choosing a destination? Authenticity above all — they want places that feel real, textured and unscripted. They prize uniqueness and are drawn to destinations that feel under-the-radar or experienced in an unconventional way (backroads over highways, locals over tour buses, winter over peak season). They value meaningful connection — Aboriginal-led experiences, sake ceremonies, conservation-driven lodges — and want to understand a place, not just photograph it. Adventure with comfort is key; challenge is attractive but suffering for its

	own sake is not. They're increasingly impact-conscious and prioritize value over price. In short: they choose destinations that promise a story and a shift in perspective.
Most wants to experience:	Smaller, lesser-known towns that are off the radar for an Australian audience. Bardstown as the Bourbon Capital of the World is a compelling angle. Keen to meet generational distillers and learn about the development of Kentucky bourbon. The music scene surrounding Bardstown is of strong interest, as are road-trip-style destinations such as Lexington and Frankfort for their local experiences and cuisine.

Bio	Bas Erkens is constantly on the move, discovering the world one bite at a time. As an editor for Foodies Magazine and Foodies Travel, he shares his love for food and travel both at home and abroad. From lobster in Belize and authentic paella in Valencia to yakitori in Japan, Bas is always on the hunt for real flavors, local products and the stories behind them.  Through inspiring travel stories, he takes you to destinations near and far - whether that's foraging with in Ireland, searching for the perfect gorgonzola in Italy or celebrating classic Dutch favorites like liquorice and mussels. Along the way, he also loves creating lists of must-visit restaurants and dishes you'll want to recreate at home. Although his parents loved food, cooking wasn't exactly their strong suit. It wasn't until he moved out on his own - after a long phase of frozen pizzas - that Bas discovered how much better food tastes when you cook it yourself. That curiosity quickly grew into a deep passion for food, travel and storytelling. Bas is always hungry, endlessly curious, and constantly looking for the best hotspots and newest food trends. Reader/viewer of their story:	Our readers are mostly foodies, 35+ and are looking for stories about gastronomy and food, combined with tips to explore a certain country or city. It's mostly couples, where 70% of our readers is female. Research shows they have higher incomes and travel multiple times a year.
Most wants to experience:	I would love to experience the culinary scene of Charlotte. From local street food to fine dining and everything in between. And online article about the best restaurants in the city would work really well, as well a story about why the city is a paradise for foodies when they travel to the US. Besides gastronomy it's always good to see some projects about local produce, for example.

What makes a great story:	I look forward to writing about the city and why foodies should travel to Charlotte. I think the destination has a lot to offer, of course more than just food – which I will include in the story as well. For this I need a good overview of different foodie hotspots (like restaurants and bars), but also some time to explore the city on my own. That's the best way to experience the vibe of the city.

Anticipated Date of Story	Autumn- or Winter-edition 2026
Shooting video/photos?	Yes, for both magazine articles & FB posts
Reader/viewer of their story:	The readers of my stories are frequent travellers to the United States and Canada, most of them couples over the age of 40. They are well travelled and open to new experiences. They are interested in gaining deeper insights into the societies of these countries, and my stories are known for their strong historical context, which encourages readers to explore these destinations further themselves.
Most wants to experience:	The stories I enjoy writing usually have a strong historical background, either rooted in history itself or connected to well-known figures such as musicians. For this reason, I would like to visit homesteads, a civil rights museum, and, if possible, a national park. My first travel book was titled Nature and History.
What makes a great story?	To write a strong destination story, I usually work with about six key topics. For America Magazine, I write multi-page feature stories. I prefer to focus on one central theme that provides a clear narrative thread for the story to develop around. In this new story, I would like to describe the historical development of the area and how it has evolved into what it is today.

Media Type + Frequency + Circ	Online Magazine   25,000 US travelers/month
Bio	Michelle de Vos is the editor of Amerika Only, a Dutch media platform for travelers who have already visited the United States at least once and are eager to return. Amerika Only inspires its audience daily through its website, newsletter, and social channels, including Facebook, Instagram, and TikTok. Beyond her role as editor, Michelle is driven by a personal love for the United States. Her fascination with the country began in childhood, sparked by movies and shows like Gossip Girl and dreams of wandering the streets of New York City. That curiosity evolved into real-life adventures, from exploring the iconic city that first captured her imagination to discovering hidden gems across the country. No two trips to America are ever the same; each journey reveals a new side of the country. Through Amerika Only we combine practical travel knowledge with enthusiasm, inspiring fellow travelers to look beyond the familiar and discover new destinations while also reconnecting them with the places they already love.
Anticipated Date of Story	Initial publication in June 2026, with repetitions throughout 2026 and 2027
Reader/viewer of their story:	Our audience consists of men and women of all ages, but they share one important thing: they have already visited the USA. They are familiar with destinations such as New York City, a West Coast road trip, or parts of Florida. Once they have experienced the U.S., they almost always want to return. We inspire them by revisiting iconic destinations and introducing new places they may not yet have considered.
Most want to experience:	We are currently working on a project called Cities Beyond the Cup, highlighting all host cities of the upcoming FIFA World Cup. During the tournament, coverage will focus on stadiums and fan zones, but our long-term goal is to show what makes each city worth visiting well beyond the event itself. We aim to help destinations maintain momentum even after the World Cup ends. Kansas City is one of the host cities, and during this FAM trip we want to experience and document the aspects of the city that resonate most with our readers.
What makes a great story:	First, authenticity. As true America enthusiasts ourselves, we only recommend places we genuinely find inspiring and enjoyable.

	Second, experiences that are distinctly American and not easily found in Europe. Think of classic diners, general stores, independent coffee shops, historic main streets, and locally owned businesses with character. If we can capture those elements in Kansas City and its surrounding areas, we can create destination stories that strongly connect with our audience!

Bio	Exame Magazine is one of Brazil's leading business publications, known for its rigorous analysis of economics, finance, and topics that shape the market. Founded in 1967, it has evolved to also cover technology, innovation, sustainability, and lifestyle. Within this broader editorial scope, Exame Casual is the section dedicated to lifestyle and trends, offering a sophisticated yet accessible look at culture, gastronomy, fashion, travel, and everyday innovation. Carolina is Exame's Head of Design and Editor-at-Large for Exame Casual. She leads the magazine's visual team and contributes special features for Casual. She also writes a monthly culture column and recurring guides to standout coffee shops around the world, blending her passion for design, coffee, and travel while helping readers discover unique experiences in global cities.
Anticipated Date of Story	First half of 2026
Reader/viewer of their story:	It is a demanding, high-income audience that values curation, context, and meaningful experiences. These readers are interested in gastronomy, travel, shopping, culture, and global trends, always with a strategic and sophisticated perspective.
Most wants to experience:	I aim to transform the journey itself into a narrative, demonstrating that the experience goes beyond simply visiting cities. The goal is to tell interconnected stories through the train journey, where each stop functions as a chapter, revealing different cultural, gastronomic, and human layers of Mississippi. In this way, the route becomes an essential part of the experience, creating rhythm and context so the reader follows the trip as a continuous narrative rather than a simple sequence of destinations.
What makes a great story:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Cultural context: understanding the history and transformations that shape the destination today.</li> <li>-People: engaging with local voices who bring authenticity and depth to the narrative.</li> <li>-Sensory experience: translating flavors, sounds, and atmospheres so the reader can "travel" through the story.</li> </ul>

Bio	As a photojournalist and writer, I create visual and editorial narratives that explore the richness of culture, emotion, and place. My lens captures fleeting moments that reveal deeper human truths, while my words trace the stories behind each image - stories of people, landscapes, and experiences that shape our world.  I document travel routes, cultural encounters, and immersive journeys with sensitivity and intention, blending photography and journalism to offer layered perspectives. Whether through a compelling portrait or a well-crafted article, my work invites reflection and connection. I believe storytelling is a bridge - between places and people, between image and insight. With a background in editorial travel writing and visual reportage, I approach each assignment with curiosity, empathy, and a commitment to authenticity. My goal is to translate the essence of a place into stories that resonate, inform, and inspire - stories that linger in memory and speak across borders.
Anticipated Date of Story	May, 2026
Reader/viewer of their story:	Readers seeking inspiration for culturally and gastronomically immersive travel experiences. This audience values experiential tourism, appreciating everything from architectural aesthetics to the living history of destinations, and is consistently looking for itineraries that go beyond the obvious.
Most wants to experience:	To capture the soul of the Deep South through two main pillars: Cajun/Creole cuisine and musical heritage. In cities such as Baton Rouge and Covington, I aim to explore the roots and authentic flavors of local cuisine. In Mobile and Charleston, my focus will be on understanding how music and history have shaped the identity of these destinations. I hope to engage in experiences that allow me to visually translate this vibrant and historic atmosphere.
What makes a great story:	-Gastronomic and Musical Identity: For me, a destination's food and sound serve as the narrative threads of the story. Access to local chefs, markets, or historic music venues is essential to conveying the destination's pulse. -Visual Narrative and Detail (Aesthetic): As a photographer, I look for locations with lighting and compositions that allow for a minimalist perspective focused on detail, creating an aesthetic that transports the reader into the scene. -Connection to Localism: I prioritize experiences that highlight the authentic heritage of the region, enabling culturally rich storytelling and the inclusion of characters that represent the essence of each city.

It launched in 1995 and was the first Brazilian publication dedicated exclusively to tourism, with a circ of 123,000. In 2018, the magazine's print edition was discontinued.
Anticipated Date of Story	TBD
Shooting video/photos?	Yes
Reader/viewer of their story:	Brazilian travelers who are interested in learning about new destinations or are actively seeking information to plan their next trips. They look for accessible and reliable insights to help them understand a place before visiting.
Most wants to experience:	I understand that the press trip is designed to address the group's general interests by showcasing the main highlights/attractions of each city, which serves as a strong starting point for the story. Even when covering multiple destinations, I believe it is important to identify a narrative thread that connects them, allowing each city to function as a chapter within a broader story.
What makes a great story?	-Gaining an understanding of each destination's identity and context—why the place matters in terms of history, culture, music, social movements, gastronomy, and local atmosphere—is essential so the reader can grasp the city's essence. -Experiencing authentic, real-life activities is key. While exclusive experiences for the group are valuable, it is also important to include activities that readers themselves could access during a regular visit.

Reader/viewer of their story:	In general, travelers who have already visited major U.S. cities and are now looking to explore new experiences. My audience for destinations outside the mainstream tourism circuit typically arrives at the website through Google or social media in search of essential information, such as “what to do in Charleston” or “where to stay in Mobile.” In addition, there is strong engagement with content that highlights curiosities and activities that offer an element of surprise. Gastronomy, for example, is always a key driver.
Most want to experience:	I am looking to discover inspiring attractions that will help me create detailed content that is still largely unexplored in Portuguese. This approach tends to attract a broader audience and reinforces the fact that few, if any, Brazilian travel platforms offer information on as many U.S. destinations as Rota de Férias. Bio	Karen Temple is an award-winning graphic designer and the web editor for Ottawa Life Magazine. With extensive experience in print media, she has worked on everything from corporate branding to annual reports and advertising campaigns. She first joined OLM as a layout designer for the print edition before expanding into writing travel features and theatre reviews. Today, she oversees the magazine's website while continuing to share compelling stories from her journeys.  OttawaLife.com/Travel: A long-established Canadian lifestyle and culture publication with a strong digital travel section. Our travel features focus on narrative storytelling, cultural insight, and practical trip-planning value. TravelTrekTour.com: A dedicated travel platform aimed at adventure-minded and globally oriented travelers.
Anticipated Date of Story	Stories can be published within one week of the trip and roll out from there. Often, there are multiple stories from one trip! Social media reels are produced by a separate team and follow a week or more after stories are published. Instagram stories will be posted daily during the trip.
Shooting video/photos?	Yes- video for TikTok and Instagram
Reader/viewer of their story:	OttawaLife.com/Travel: OLM readers are primarily Canadian professionals, couples, and families planning mid-range to premium trips. They're interested in culture, food, outdoor experiences, and destinations with a strong sense of place. They value storytelling, insider recommendations, and practical guidance that helps them plan meaningful travel. TravelTrekTour.com audience leans more toward adventure-oriented and frequent international travelers. They're drawn to national parks, road trips, outdoor recreation, and immersive, off-the-beaten-path experiences. They want depth, authenticity, and itineraries that feel personal and discoverable. Across both platforms, our readers are curious, experience-driven travelers who appreciate narrative-rich features paired with useful, actionable information.
Most want to experience:	Experiences that help me understand the character of a destination — the things that make it distinct and memorable. That typically includes: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>-Signature cultural, historical, or culinary experiences</li> <li>-Opportunities to meet local makers, chefs, artists, or guides</li> <li>-Outdoor or nature-based activities that showcase the landscape</li> <li>-Unique or story-rich locations that help differentiate the destination</li> </ul> These elements allow me to produce multiple story angles and create content that resonates with both of our readerships.

What makes a great story:	1. Authentic storytelling moments: Encounters, conversations, and experiences that reveal the destination’s personality. These details make a story come alive. 2. Distinctive, place-specific elements: Local food traditions, landscapes, architecture, history, festivals, or community culture — anything that gives readers a sense of discovery. 3. Practical value for travelers: Clear takeaways: where to stay, what to eat, how to get around, and the best times to visit. Our stories blend narrative with useful guidance so readers can easily plan their own trip.

Bio	As a globetrotting journalist, I love meeting people who are passionate about their region and culture. After writing about slow tourism for various media outlets, I travel the world — from Los Angeles to Port-Louis and Montreal — to uncover the best places and experiences to share with Escapade Magazine readers. Escapade Magazine is a publication that's shaking up travel journalism with a fresh, modern, and often unconventional perspective.
Anticipated Date of Story

Reader/viewer of their story:	They are curious and inspired travelers, seeking well-planned city breaks, carefully selected addresses, and experiences that make them want to pack their bags. They enjoy being inspired and dreaming as much as possible: they want to be guided, from the best restaurants to the best hotels, with options ranging from affordable to premium favorites. Mostly urban, 25-49 years old, they are frequent travelers — as couples, with friends, families, or solo — who take several trips a year and strive to make the most of each getaway without sacrificing authenticity.
Most wants to experience:	A meeting with one or more people passionate about their city/neighborhood/country/culture. I also hope to discover experiences truly rooted in the local area: a dish eaten only there, a tradition practiced only there, an activity that tells the story of this part of the country and makes you want to go there specifically, partly for that reason. And if the program allows for some improvisation, through free time, it's often an opportunity to add a little something extra or a fun story.
What makes a great story?	A strong local “character”: someone who embodies the place, whose voice and passion bring the destination to life. - A differentiating element: an activity, a tradition, an ultra-local detail, something you can only experience there — that gives the story its unique flavor. - Great places to eat, restaurants, accommodation, experiences to enjoy—with different price ranges, so that every reader can find something they like and leave with a list of ideas. ⇒ More specifically, since we highlight several great restaurants and accommodations for the ‘City Break’ format in Mobile: addresses for our favorites to emphasize. And an experience/historical fact/tradition to feature in a mini “Good to know” section within the article. Similarly, for Louisiana, I will guide the selection based on the trip, the theme, and the experience there, but there will also be some favorite places to highlight.

Reader/viewer of their story:	My community is sporty and loves to travel. They often already have children but sometimes travel alone so they can do sports activities in peace. When you travel to run a marathon and your partner is also running, finding childcare during the race is not easy, especially abroad. This is why practical information is very important for me to put together and share out of a trip content.
Most wants to experience:	I want to discover even more about the southern states that I did not know before my previous trips to the USA. Bio	As a curious and multi-task journalist, I love meeting people who are passionate about their region and culture. I write about high-quality experiences, immersive programs and initiatives that associate travel with local communities. Local figure encounters and in-depth storytelling are essential to travel content rendition and readers' expectations.
Anticipated Date of Story
Reader/viewer of their story:	Yonder's readership is primarily composed of frequent international travelers who are curious, discerning, and demanding, seeking high-quality experiences rather than standardized ones. They are an urban, predominantly upper-middle-class audience, sensitive to aesthetics, upscale or distinctive hospitality, and emerging cultural and culinary scenes. Our readers travel as couples or solo, sometimes with their families, but with a strong expectation: to discover a destination through unique places, encounters, and a personal editorial approach, far removed from tourist clichés.
Most want to experience:	Above all, I hope to experience Tennessee as a sensory and cultural immersion, through what constitutes its core identity: music, of course, but also the places that bring it to life today. In Nashville, I'm particularly eager to discover the energy of legendary venues like the Grand Ole Opry and the Ryman Auditorium, but also to understand how this history continues in more contemporary or intimate spaces. A visit to the Country Music Hall of Fame and the National Museum of African American Music is especially appealing to me for its perspective on musical influences, from gospel to hip-hop. Beyond institutions, I'm drawn to live experiences: stepping into a honky-tonk on Broadway, discovering a concert in a more intimate venue, or chatting with local musicians to get a feel for the current scene. The contrast with Rugby also intrigues me greatly: the timeless atmosphere of this Victorian town, its stories and legends—especially through nighttime visits—offer powerful, almost cinematic narrative material. Finally, in Knoxville, I want to explore this "Maker City" identity through its artisans, breweries, and hybrid spaces, where artistic creation, music, and gastronomy seem to converse. The proximity to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park also adds a dimension of respite and landscape that I find essential in a travel narrative content.

What makes a great story:	- Evocative and tangible locations: I seek out places that immediately tell a story and possess a strong visual and cultural identity: a legendary concert hall like the Ryman Auditorium, a historically significant site like Brushy Mountain State Penitentiary, or even an artisan's workshop in Knoxville. - Encounters with local figures: These exchanges are essential to move beyond a purely descriptive approach. This could be a musician in Nashville or even a historian or guide in Rugby who can recount the village's utopian origins.

She contributes to FrontRowSociety, a German-language luxury and lifestyle magazine featuring visually rich destination reports, exclusive hotel and restaurant reviews, culinary experiences, and automotive content with a strong reach across the DACH market. She also writes for fair now!, the Sustainable Finance &amp; Lifestyle Magazine, covering ESG trends, responsible investing, and sustainability paired with travel, wellness, and modern living. Further outlets include Kneipp Bewegt (holistic health and mindful lifestyle) and Reiselust (OE24), Austria's weekly travel magazine.
Anticipated Date of Story	2026
Shooting video/photos?	Yes
Reader/viewer of their story:	FrontRowSociety is a German-language luxury &amp; lifestyle magazine with a high media reach. The educated and affluent readership comes from Germany, Austria, and Switzerland. Our editorial team travels globally, reporting on extraordinary destinations, exclusive hotels, outstanding restaurants, as well as culinary experiences, and automotive and motorsport. This results in visually rich reports for online and print, offering readers authentic stories.
Most wants to experience:	I am looking forward to unique, authentic experiences – meeting inspiring people with strong personal stories, discovering local cuisine, special hotels, nature and culture. I'm particularly interested in the human stories behind a destination, like Sallie Ann Robinson, as they give a place its true character. Sustainability/responsible travel, local producers/artisans, hidden gems/off-the-beaten-path places, wellness/slow travel, storytelling potential for readers...
What makes a great story?	A great destination story is always built on three elements: people, authenticity and atmosphere. I look for inspiring personalities with strong, genuine stories, places with a clear sense of identity and experiences that create an emotional connection. It's not just about where you go, but about what you feel and who you meet along the way. Of course, beautiful hotels and outstanding restaurants are essential elements, as well as cultural highlights, iconic sights and experiences in

	nature. All of these aspects contribute to the overall feeling of a destination and help create a well-rounded and engaging story.

Bio	Cristina Giuliano is a senior editor at Askaneews specializing on the global travel and tourism industry. Drawing on a professional background in Tourism and travel service management, she provides expert analysis on international market trends, tourism resilience, and the strategic development of global destinations. Her reporting blends investigative rigor with narrative storytelling, covering a wide spectrum of the industry—from the analysis of international tourism boards and large-scale hospitality policies to the promotion of sustainable models and heritage-driven travel.
Anticipated Date of Story	1 month after the trip
Reader/viewer of their story:	The readership of Askaneews is broad and diverse, encompassing a wide spectrum of readers with different interests and travel habits
Most wants to experience:	For the FAM trip, a key area of interest—particularly in Alabama—is the historical and cultural narrative linked to civil and human rights, which offers strong editorial depth and relevance. Food is not considered a primary focus for an Italian audience, although standout dining experiences are always of interest when they reach a truly high standard. There is also a strong personal interest in hotels with a distinctive history and identity, properties that can tell a story beyond hospitality itself.
What makes a great story?	In crafting a compelling destination story, the priority is given to powerful emotions and remarkable, almost cinematic stories—those that leave a lasting impression and elevate the narrative beyond a simple travel account.

Reader/viewer of their story:	A broad and dynamic audience, primarily young travelers, including solo travelers as well as couples and families. The editorial approach is intentionally wide-ranging, designed to resonate with different travel styles and sensibilities.
Most want to experience:	The goal of the FAM trip is to capture the true spirit of Nashville, exploring its deep-rooted musical heritage and highlighting key places for country music lovers and beyond. At the same time, the intention is to portray Tennessee through multiple lenses—natural, historical, and cultural—while also incorporating selected gastronomic insights. The result is envisioned as a well-rounded, 360-degree narrative.
What makes a great story:	A compelling destination story is built on the ability to uncover and tell the stories that define a place, giving voice to the people who live there and shaping a vivid, almost iconic image of the destination. The ultimate aim is to inspire readers and spark their imagination, leaving them with the desire to experience those places firsthand.

Reader/viewer of their story:	The target audience varies depending on the experiences featured, as the content is developed for a range of publications addressing different readerships: men (such as GQ), women (including F, Natural Style, Io Donna, Confidenze), and families (such as Style Piccoli). The narrative approach is therefore adaptable, shaped each time by the angle and tone most relevant to the specific readership.
Most wants to experience:	In the case of NC, the interest lies in exploring the local gastronomic scene—ideally through encounters with female chefs—alongside themes of sustainability and green living. Particular attention is also given to art and architecture of note, as well as to hospitality concepts that are thoughtfully integrated into their surrounding environment.
What makes a great story:	What defines a strong destination story is, above all, the presence of meaningful narratives—places, people, and experiences that resonate beyond their local context and can connect with an Italian audience. Stories that stand out are those capable of translating a destination into a recognizable and compelling cultural reference, much like the enduring fascination with Amish communities, the architectural legacy of Chicago, or the musical identity of Nashville.

Bio	Jacqui Agate is a journalist, US travel specialist and the North America editor at Wanderlust magazine, the UK's largest and longest-running travel media brand, committed to "authentic, responsible, meaningful travel". Jacqui also writes regular freelance features for newspapers including The Times and The Telegraph. She has a particular passion for the Southern USA and her travels have taken her across all 12 of the Travel South USA member states.
Anticipated Date of Story	TBC – Kansas City story linked to FIFA World Cup dates.
Shooting video/photos?	Yes, via iPhone for social
Reader/viewer of their story:	Wanderlust readers are cultured, frequent international travellers who care about being deeply immersed in a destination and connecting with locals. Their core interests are culture and heritage, the outdoors and wildlife, Indigenous stories and traditions, and history.
Most wants to experience:	I'm interested in experiencing the cultural touchpoints that make Kansas City and Missouri unique. There's a strong hook with the city being a host for FIFA World Cup, so it's about discovering how our readers can dive deeper and really understand the city.
What makes a great story:	News hooks are always essential. What's the reason we should be writing about a destination now? An anniversary/major event/new museum or trail opening/new flight route? Next, it's about what's unique or surprising about the destination (eg: I loved N. Alabama's surprising musical history or the fact that Chattanooga has been named America's first national park city). How can this be shaped into an interesting angle on the destination? Finally, I'm looking for narrative drivers and local people to connect with. Which characters can bring the story to life? Wanderlust features are filled with local cooler and voices from diverse perspectives, so this is key.

Bio Qin's website: qinxie.co.uk	Qin Xie is an experienced writer and editor who specializes in food and travel. She regularly writes for newspapers, websites and magazines both in the UK and internationally. Qin is based in London, but travels frequently for assignments, often spending weeks in a destination to truly get a feel for the place. After studying philosophy and economics at the University of Bristol, Qin went on to train as a journalist at Harlow College, where she gained her NCTJ certificate. Early on in her journalism career, Qin trained as a chef at Leiths School of Food and Wine, which fed into her food writing. Qin also holds the Level 3 Award in Wines and Spirits from the WSET and judged for the International Wine Challenge. She is the co-author of two books. Hunan: A Lifetime of Secrets from Mr Peng's Chinese Kitchen was published by Random House April 2014. It was voted one of the 20 best food books of 2014 by Observer Food Monthly. She also co-authored the Experience London guide for Lonely Planet, published in summer 2022.
Shooting video/photos?	Yes
Reader/viewer of their story:	In general, the readers I write for are affluent, well-travelled and curious. I tend to focus on cities, nature/wildlife, soft adventure, and restaurants. I don't cover family travel. My editors love stories about hidden gems and angles that make you think differently about a well-covered destination.
Most want to experience:	Appalachian Trail aside, I'd love to do some kayaking if that's an option (flatwater rather than white water). Also looking forward to the ghost tour.
What makes a great story?	People who can put the destination into context. Time to explore and take it all in.

Bio	I am based in Glasgow, Scotland. I cover everything from general news, entertainment and features to world affairs. I also write travel features for our weekend magazine, including coverage of recent trips to Boston, the Maldives, Tuscany and Malta. I have been in journalism for almost 40 years, working mostly in Scotland, previously for national titles The Sun and the Sunday Mail. I also enjoyed a decade-long stint living in Queenstown, then Auckland in New Zealand, where I was a senior journalist for the New Zealand Herald, but I returned to Scotland in 2017 to take up a position at the Sunday Post.
Anticipated Date of Story	Late 2026
Shooting video/photos?	No
Reader/viewer of their story:	The Sunday Post has a readership that is predominantly over 50 years old and have high disposable incomes, so I bear that in mind when writing articles and try to highlight activities and trips that speak to that age group, including if their children or grandchildren might be joining them.
Most want to experience:	I have been to the US many times since I was a teenager but never as far south as Mobile before, and I like to experience local architecture, music, food, nature and culture.
What makes a great story?	I look for an experience that the reader would find interesting and exciting, and that I feel they might like to experience too. I endeavor to put them on the spot, and in my shoes, so to speak. Also, a colorful chat with locals or guides often makes for a lively start to a travel article.
